

CHEROKEE AGENCY HISTORIC PLACE

Once in Charge of Pierce
M. Butler, Who Lost
Life in Battle.

MANY CHARACTERS

Near By Lived Rev. Gunter, Preacher, Believing in Preparedness.

Special to The World.

TAHLEQUAH, Okla., June 17.—One among many of the interesting places in the vicinity of this place is the old Cherokee agency. Previous to the consolidation of the various agencies of Indian territory into the Union agency, each nation of the five civilized tribes had its own agent. The headquarters of the agent was near to the capital of the nation to which he was assigned. The Cherokee agency was located northwest of Tahlequah, shortly after the establishment of the Cherokee government in Indian territory, following the removal to the west at the close of the thirties of the past century.

Most Noted Agent.
Several noted men were in charge at various times, but the most notable was Pierce M. Butler of South Carolina. Agent Butler was in charge of matters relating to the affairs of the Cherokees during the early forties and had many important and momentous questions with which to contend. He was agent during the wild and dangerous times preceding the signing of the treaty of amnesty in 1846.

At this time it seemed that there would be a civil war among the Cherokees, as both the eastern and western branches were dissatisfied over matters which arose concerning the settlement of the eastern Cherokees in the section of country which had long been occupied by the western branch. The trouble was settled, however, and when the Mexican war broke out Mr. Butler gave up his position and left for his native state. The Palmetto regiment, which was great renown in the conflict with Mexico, was one of the most noted of the contingents from South Carolina. At the head of one of these regiments was the erstwhile agent to the Cherokees, now Col. Pierce M. Butler. A brave and gallant officer, he rode at the head of his men during the heat of the battle, but was destined to lose his life. He was at the battle of Churubusco, that the South Carolina regiment was hotly engaged with the Mexican hordes when a rifle bullet entered the brain of Colonel Butler, who was at the head of the regiment, and he fell to the ground, dead.

A Militant Minister.
Another noted and picturesque character, who once lived near the old agency, and whose grave is in the burial ground nearby, was the Rev. Edward Gunter, a man of white and Cherokee blood. He had taken a prominent part in the affairs of the Cherokees in the old nation east. Upon the removal west he was placed in charge of a detachment of Indians and brought them safely to the western territory, coming in boats along the Mississippi, Arkansas and Grand rivers. Upon arriving in the new location west, the Reverend Gunter, who was of the Methodist denomination, resumed his ministerial work, his field being extensive and the country through which he had to travel wild and often dangerous on account of the lawless characters then abounding. There was also a political faction some members of which looked with disfavor upon the old preacher. But he was a militant personage, and is said never to have allowed himself to be imposed upon. He believed in preparedness and for that reason when setting out upon his journeys always carried two large and heavy pistols suspended from his belt. While it is not of record that he ever had occasion to use them, he was ready and willing to do so in case the necessity arose.

TULSANS QUALIFY AS TARPON CHAMPS

Trio of Local Men Receive
Gold and Silver Medals
for Feats.

Do you know what it is to take a part in the sport of kings; to feel the tempered steel fishing rod bend like a willow, see the silken cord cut the water like a razor blade, and feel the death fight that is taking place upon the hook at the other end of the thousand or more feet of line? If not you have missed the greatest game that man can play.

Three recently returned from the Arkansas Pass banks of the Gulf of Mexico three Tulsa men: T. J. Hartman, F. A. Gillespie and Bernard Gillespie, who won medals for the fisherman's luck which crowned their short vacation spent at tarpon fishing.

Average Is Small.
"The fishing is done from a boat in which there is a guide and an oarsman. These men are experts and upon them is due much of the credit when a sportsman lands his tarpon. Even at that it is but an average of one fish in every fifteen hooked, that is finally landed and scaled.

"Our party succeeded in landing five fish," Mr. Gillespie succeeded in taking one which measured five feet, seven and a half inches and weighed more than 125 pounds. Young Gillespie and myself caught tarpon weighing over ninety pounds and measuring more than four and a half feet. For this we were awarded silver medals. Mr. Gillespie got the gold medal.

"We fished with a one thousand-foot line, tested to a dead weight load of 18 pounds and baited with mullet. When fish is hooked it immediately begins to lunge in the air, sometimes jumping as high as 15 feet.

Mr. Hartman said that when once a fish is hooked the fisherman always yells. "You cannot help it," he said. "It is just a part of the sport. I have hunted big game and fished for all kinds of fish, but tarpon fishing is the sport of kings. It is the greatest yet."

It Worked.
An honest citizen of Brussels, returning home late at night, under artificial stimulation and singing at the top of his voice was apprehended by a German patrol, says the Echo Belge. The citizen resisted, and after a scuffle broke away from his captors and fell into the canal. Unable to swim, he began to call for help, without eliciting response from the German policemen, who seemed to think this was as good a way as any out of the situation. Just as he was going down for the third time the fugitive had a happy thought. With all his remaining strength he yelled "Vive France! Vive la France!" A couple of Germans dived for him at once. He was hauled out, taken to the lockup, and the next day sentenced to three months for uttering seditious cries.—Exchange.

Prepared.
"The pen is mightier than the sword."

"That's good news. I think it is agreed that our pens are about the best in the world."

ZINC AND LEAD IN PARK HILL RANGE?

Paying Mine Being Developed in New
Section; Tahlequah
Items.

Special to The World.

TAHLEQUAH, Okla., June 17.—What it is believed may result in a paying zinc and lead mine is being developed in the valley of the Park hill range of hills, several miles south of this place. For many years it has been known that there were lead and zinc deposits in this particular section, but only desultory efforts have been made heretofore to locate the main veins. From present indications some real work is going to be done and the result may be all that is desired.

The wheat crop is being harvested in this section and compared with the crop of last year is not very good. The heads are short and the grain rather light. The weather conditions of winter and spring were not favorable.

People are awakening to the fact that in this section is some of the finest land suitable for the propagation of small fruits in the southwest. While the berry industry is yet in its infancy, enough have been raised to prove that in time to come fortunes will be made by Cherokee county small fruit cultivators. The uncertainty of the seasons make apples, pears and peaches a somewhat doubtful crop, but the berries never fail, and some of the finest of such fruit yet grows wild.

Explained.

During the recent Shakespeare
celebration a number of local amateurs
appeared in the great dramatist's
most famous tragedy. Next day
the principal actor inquired of a critical friend what he thought of the performance.

"It was great! Simply great!" was the reply. "As you played Hamlet I was easy to see why Ophelia should go and drown herself."—Boston Transcript.

His Need.
For three successive nights Newpop
had walked the floor with the baby.
On the fourth night he became desperate
and bought a bottle of soothing syrup.

"Why, James," exclaimed his wife,
when she saw the bottle, "what did you buy that for? Don't you know it is very dangerous to give a child
anything like that?"

"Don't worry," was her husband's reply. "I'm going to take it myself."

Animals That Never Eat.
Have you ever realized what a number scientific appliances have been named after animals? And can you furnish an explanation?

A mechanic puts his work upon a horse or buck and he punches or bends it by a convenient bar. Hoisting is done by a crab, a pulley helps to drive machinery which a donkey engine turns. A fish connects parts end to end, shells are used all over,
while a worm does quiet, but powerful
work.

Again, a cock shuts off the water;

The most pleasant and inexpensive trip you can possibly get is one to Hot Springs.

The Majestic hotel is the most modern one at the springs, a hotel where you always feel at home. They have their own baths in the building and beyond question the best service of any hotel in the country. The table can not be surpassed by any—you will enjoy your stay there. Ask for Mr. Jones.

A ram lifts it. A printing press has a fly, the first locomotive had a grasshopper valve motion and butterfly
valves are common.

Herringbone gears are used by the best builders; turtles fit printing press
cylinders, and fly wheels are running all over the world. In drilling, even,
an old man is called into service and
doctors prevent faulty lathe work.

EXTREME WEAKNESS AND SUFFERING

Read How Mrs. Goodling got Relief and Strength.

York, Pa.—"I have used Lydia E.
Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and found it to be all you say it is. I was so sick that I could not stand at my sink to wash dishes and I
could not sit without
a pillow under me.
I had the doctor
every few days but
since I have taken
the Compound I
don't have to send
for him. I have had three children and could not raise any of them, but since I have taken the Compound I have a bright baby boy. I advise every suffering woman to try it and get relief. It has done wonders for me."—Mrs. CATHERINE GOODLING, 138
E. King Street, York, Pa.

When a medicine has been successful
in bringing health to so many, no woman has a right to say without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." There must be more than a hundred thousand women in this country who, like Mrs. Goodling, have proven what wonders Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can do for weak and ailing women. Try it and see for yourself.
